BANKERS DEFEAT LAWYERS ONE UP

GOLFING MONEY SHARKS HUMBLE LEGAL CHALLENGERS.

BANKERS RESTRAINED?

Order From Judge Dawson Served by Chief England—Bankers Protest—Lawyers Alibi—Match Tomorrow

According to the best available and most accurate information, (the official score card was lost), golfing bankers yesterday afternoon defeated the challenging lawyers by the narrow margin of 1 up. The lawyers have nothing but purely circumstantial evidence so concede their defeat.

Things were loking gloomy for the lawyers getting a favorable verdict after the first foursome when they emerged from the encounter with five down. S. G. Gillam and John D. Richey were carrying the banker's colors and they shot a 48 and a 63 respectively. George Robb Ellison and George Pat Wright of the lawyers, covered the course in 63 and 53 respectively, making their total of 116, five more than their opponents.

But things began to look up for the Blackstones when the second foursome opened. W. N. Deatherage and Ellis G. Cook were the anchor men for the lawyers and by turning in scores of 52 and 57 respectively, they emerged from the fray with four up, lacking only one stroke of knotting the count. Banker Wilfley and Banker Rowley turned in respective scores of 55 and 58 in this foursome.

After the crowd of curious spectators had massed themselves along the line of play, Chief of Police England appeared on the scene and served the following petition for restraining order upon the bankers:

Petition for Restraining Order.

In the Circuit Court of Handicap County, State of No Par.

Ellis G. Cook, George Pat Wright, W. N. Deatherage and George R. Ellison, Plaintiffs, vs. George E. Wilfley, Samuel G. Gillam, John D. Richey and Burt M. Rowley, Defendants.

The plaintiffs state that they have been selected by the Honorable Bar of Nodaway County to represent said Bar in a contest at the ancient and honorable game of golf on the links of the Maryville Country Club, Maryville, Missouri, on June 18, 1923.

That the defendants have selected themselves to represent the banking profession in said contest.

The plaintiffs further state that said defendants, pretending and assuming to have only the average and usual ability and proficiency possessed by men who devote enough time to their own business to earn the necessaries of life, and by such pretenses having inveigled these plaintiffs into contest, have wrongfully and secretly during the last two weeks, and especially on the Sabbath day, commonly known as Sunday, practiced said game until they have acquired unusual ability as golfers, and have also courted Lady Luck to such extent that will enjoy an unfair advantage whenever and wherever chance plays a part in the game.

Your petitioners further state that said defendants having thus acquired said ability are conspiring and planning to make unusually brilliant shots and trick shots to and at the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth holes of said golf course.

Your petitioners therefore pray the court that the defendants and each of them be enjoined and restrained from counting on their total scores any shot or series of shots made by them during said game in excess of the average number of shots made by the average player for each of said holes; and your petitioners further pray the court that said defendants and each and all of them be enjoined and restrained from turning in a score of less than 70 in said game, in order that the rights of the plaintiffs may not be violated and that the ends of justice may be served.

Respectfully submitted,
ELLIS G. COOK,
GEORGE PAT WRIGHT,
W. N. DEATHERAGE,
GEORGE R. ELLISON,
Plaintiffs.

Order.

The foregoing petition having been presented to the undersigned Judge in vacation, who, after having read the plaintiffs' petition, finds the facts therein stated to be true, and that the

Bank Cashier Charged With $150 000 Default

Cashier Of American State Bank At Wichita Said To Have Conducted Loose Financial Methods

Topeka, Kan., June 19—Orders calling for the arrest of Phillip Drumm, cashier of the American State Bank at Wichita were issued here today. Drumm is charged with being in default of $150,000. The orders were made out by Carl J. Peterson, state bank commissioner.

An investigation of the books of the bank show that great irregularities in loans and speculations had been made. It is said that oil companies received benefits of the loose financial methods of the bank. Officials said today that losses of individual depositors would be small. The bank is closed today.

Wichita, Kan., June 19—A confession from Phillip Drumm, cashier of the American State Bank, obtained today stated that he was short about $150,000. After the confession, Drumm was successful in getting away and had not been located up to noon today.

Drumm's bond, as cashier of the bank, was $100,000.

DEACON ENTANGLED WAS WELL GIVEN

MARY JOSEPHINE DREYER, LOIS DUNKLE CAPTIVATED AUDIENCE

TO BE REPEATED TONIGHT

Clever Acting Intermingled With Catchy Song Hits—Miss Bess Scott Is Director Of Play

Two hours of clever acting intermingled with catchy song hits describes the Oxford Club's presentation of "The Deacon Entangled" at the Empire Theater last night.

Mary Josephine Dreyer and Lois Dunkle, two wee small girls, were the hit of the entire performance. The tiny tots appeared in a specialty singing act which took the audience by storm. Seldom has a Maryville audience had the opportunity of listening to two such clever little girls and every word of their songs could be distinctly heard in any part of the theater.

"The Deacon Entangled" is a good, clean production full of rich spicy comedy with a well-organized chorus of pretty girls. The musical numbers were exceptionally good.

Arthur Garrett, as the deacon, C. Byron James, as Calvin Spangler, the star baseball player, carried their parts with unusual ability. Ray Blomfield, as the Rev. Dr. Sopher was so wrapped up in foreign missions that his charming daughter Thelma Stevens, as Georgia, seemed to be a secondary consideration for his interests. The old saying about the children of ministers would certainly hold good in this case. Blomfield and Miss Stevens were very good in last night's production.

Mrs. Blaine Archer, as the wife of the deacon, showed rare ability in portraying how to henpeck a husband. What a bad example to set right here in the month of June—when so many of the sterner sex are trying to muster courage to make the supreme sacrifice.

Emmett Bartram, as Harry Baxter the sport reporter, might get a job on one of the metropolitan dailies, but no one working on a Maryville paper would find time to love his girl as much as Bartram did. He was with Ethel Wallace, as Ruth Penrose, about all the time and did a pretty good job of making love. No wonder the poor girl didn't want to go away to boarding school and leave the young struggling journalist by himself!

All in all, "The Deacon Entangled" is a first class production. The only criticism to make is that it is too long between acts. Probably the scenes will be shifted a little quicker tonight when the production will be repeated. The first curtain is at 8:30 o'clock.

GEORGE S. BAKER IS 87 YEARS YOUNG

HE ESTABLISHED FIRST BANK IN COUNTY IN 1868

BUILT REAL ESTATE BANK

Only 100 Persons Living in Maryville When Mr. Baker First Came Here—Few Scattered Stores

George S. Baker, pioneer banker of Nodaway County, is 87 years old today.

He was born in Madison County, Kentucky, June 19, 1836 and came to this County in 1851. In December, 1868, he organized the first bank of Nodaway County under the name of George S. Baker and Company. This institution was located on the site where the Nodaway Valley Bank now is. For three years it was the only bank in the County. W. C. Orear, J. C. Alexander, J. P. Prather and E. S. Stinson were associated with Mr. Baker in this bank. He is only surviving member of the firm.

In October 1874, Mr. Baker built a bank on the site of the present Farmers' Trust Company and established the business under the name of Baker, Saunders and company. In 1888, the name was changed to the Maryville National Bank.

In September 1896, he organized the present Real Estate Bank and built the building. He is still a director in this bank and his son, George B. Baker is president.

When Mr. Baker started a banking business in Maryville, money was lent at 12 per cent interest and 10 per cent was paid on time deposits. This was long before the days of bank examiners and commissioners and a bank could lend any amount of money it desired.

About 100 persons lived in Maryville when Mr. Baker first came to the town. Only a few scattered stores marked what was called the trading place. On rainy days, Mr. Baker said the clerks would hitch up a yoke of oxen, drive to St. Joseph and bring back boxes of merchandise which had been shipped over the Missouri River. While crossing the bottoms, the clerks would carry the heavy boxes or else help the oxen pull through the mire. There was not a single set of harness in the entire County at that time, he said, as only oxen were used for transportation.

Mr. Baker now lives at 305 West Third street.

Allison Funeral Rites Held Today at Hopkins

Funeral services were held this afternoon at 1 o'clock for James Allison at New Hope church, six miles west of Hopkins. Mr. Allison died at his home in Hopkins following an illness of a complication of diseases. He has been a resident of Nodaway county for forty-five years.

Mr. Allison was eighty-nine years old. He is survived by his wife, four sons and two daughters, who were all with him at the time of his death. They are Miol Allison, Hopkins, William Allison, Colorado, George Allison, Hopkins, John Allison, New Market, Ia., Mrs. Amy Ella Clary, Bedford, and Mrs. Viola Dowell, Bedford.

M. E. South to Hold Church at the Park

Next Sunday the congregation of the M. E. Church, South, will hold its morning services at the College Park and will be followed by a basket dinner. The occasion is the regular quarterly conference of the church. The Rev. W. L. Scarborogh, presiding elder of this district will deliver the address. Special music to include community singing is being planned. Sunday school services will be held as usual at the church.

The question of the new church building will probably be taken up at this time and it is hoped that the building permit and release of the funds can be secured at this time.

Exam. Water Samples at College Laboratory

A test of the swimming pool water has been made by John A. DeMott in the chemistry department of the College. The analysis shows the usual amount of organisms, but not to a great excess. The report of the examining chemist shows that the swimming water was in good condition. The water is treated regularly with copper sulphate and chloride of lime.

Samples of city water have also been examined by DeMott who is taking special work in biology preparatory to a medical course. Any person is invited to bring samples of water to the College and it will be examined and a complete analysis made. This service is without charge.

TRIAL OF ST, JOE POLICEMEN OPENS

ARE CHARGED WITH MURDER OF NELLIE HALE

JURYMEN KLAN MEMBERS

Two Admit Membership—Trial Is Outgrowth of Klan Demonstration and Police Board Resignation

St. Joseph, Mo., June 19.—The trial of O. J. Gartland and George Pauly, former policemen charged with the slaying of Nellie Hale, 14, was begun here today. The selection of the jury is expected to take considerable time. Twenty-two have been chosen on the panel and two of these admitted membership in the Ku Klux Klan. A third admitted having paid membership fee.

The girl was killed by a stray bullet, said to have been fired at a car believed to have contained liquor. In its trail echoed a bitter fight between the Ku Klux Klan and the police administration here. The girl was one of five persons killed in what was declared to be promiscious shooting. The Klan created a furor over the girl's death and took charge of her funeral. It resulted in the ousting of Clay McDonald, chief of police and the resignation of the police board.

Seventeen Students in Bird Study Class

Seventeen students are enrolled in the course of bird study at the State Teachers College tihs summer. The class is under the direction of C. C. Leeson and meets at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday mornings. About twenty-seven species of birds are heard and seen at each class period. It is the purpose of this course to teach students how to know birds by their songs as well as other features. Each member of the class has constructed a bird house and these will be placed on the campus. This will make about twenty-four altogether.

JUDGE GALLATIN CRAIG DIES TODAY

HEART TROUBLE CLAIMS FORMER CIRCUIT JUDGE.

WAS AN EMINENT JURIST

Was City Attorney, Prosecuting Attorney and Circuit Judge Here—No Funeral Arrangements.

Judge Gallatin Craig one of the ablest jurists Nodaway County ever produced, died at 11:30 o'clock this morning at his home on East Fourth street. Mr. Craig was 70 years old last May. He had been in ill health for some time, but took a turn for the worse two weeks ago and was brought home from a sanitarium in St. Joseph. Heart trouble was the immediate cause of his death.

No funeral arrangements have been made pending word from out-of-town relatives. He is survived by his wife and two children, Laura, who has been associated with the Public Welfare Association at Madison, Wis., and Albert, who is assistant technical editor of the Popular Radio Magazine at New York City. Albert arrived at his father's bedside Saturday. Judge Craig is also survived by three brothers, Silas Craig of Springfield, Mo., Virginius T. Craig, and Joshua Morris Craig of Ghent, Ky., and a sister, Laura Craig, also of Ghent.

Judge Craig was born on May 20, 1853, in Gallatin County, Ky., the fifth son of Albert Gallatin Craig and Virginia Brooking Craig. The Craig family, of Scottish ancestry, was founded in Virginia in 1650 and its representatives were prominent in connection with events of the Revolutionary War, Joshua Morris, a great grand uncle, being one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and another great uncle, George Walton, being also one of the signers of the immortal instrument.

In the common schools of his native county he acquired his preliminary education, which was supplemented by a course in Ghent College in Carroll County, Ky. With the determination to make the practice of law his life work he matriculated as a law student in the University of Virginia, and was numbered among its graduates on the completion of the regular course. In the year 1877 he was admitted to practice at Warsaw, Ky., and in 1878 he came to Maryville. Here he was first associated in practice with Judge C. A. Anthony, the connection being maintained for some years, or until Judge Anthony was elected to the bench. Judge Craig was afterward associated with James J. Johnson, and this professional relation continued until he was elected prosecuting attorney. In 1889 he was chosen by popular vote for the office of city attorney of Maryville and served for two years. In 1890 he was elected prosecuting attorney of the county and at the November election of 1898 he was chosen circuit judge, succeeding his old law partner, Judge C. A. Anthony.

It was while Judge Craig was on the bench that his health began to fail and he suffered a nervous breakdown in 1902. Judge W. C. Ellison was appointed as his successor. His condition became so it was necessary to take him to a hospital where he was confined for some sixteen or seventeen years. About three years ago Judge Craig returned home as he was greatly improved in health but it was necessary again for him to be taken to a hospital. His health began rapidly to fail and about two weeks ago he was brought home as he expressed a desire to die at home.

In November, 1882, Judge Craig was united in marriage in Maryville to Miss Chloe L. Lieber. Two children were born, Albert Gallatin of New York City, and Laura Lieber Craig. They were at his bedside at his death.

On the bench Judge Craig won an enviable position among the jurists of the state. His decisions were the highest type of the justice that knows no bias and were based entirely upon the evidence and the law applicable to it.

A man of unimpeachable character and natural intellectual endowments, with a thorough understanding of the law, patience, urbanity and industry, he took to the bench the very highest qualifications for this responsible office, and his record as a judge was in harmony with his record as a man and lawyer, distinguished by unswerving integrity and a masterful grasp of every problem that presented itself for solution.

Rouw Admits He Got $100 "to Keep Still"

Says He Saw Leighton Mounts Buried After Northwestern Univeristy Class Fight In 1921

Clifton, Ariz., June 19—Benjamin H. Rouw who claims that he had seen the burial of Leighton Mounts, student of Northwestern University, opened up against the investigation of the sudden disappearance of the University student.

When questioned here today about his statement last week, Rouw said, "I kept still because I was given $100 to forget what I had seen." For the $100 paid, a receipt was given. Rouw claims that he can identify at least four of the persons involved in the burial ceremony.

Leighton Mounts vanquished after a class fight in 1921. The grand jury conducted an investigation but no direct results have been made.

CHICAGO MAN IS "GIRL BANDIT"

POLICE BELIEVE THEY HAVE SOLVED MURDER MYSTERY

KILLED RICHARD TESMER

His Wife is Sure of Identification—All Feminine Accessories Found in Thompson's Room

Chicago, June 19—In Fred Thompson, 34, who lives a double life of a man and woman, the police believe they have the girl bandit, who on June 5, shot and killed Richard Tesmer, wealthy insurance man.

Thompson, garbed in feminine finery, long passed for the wife of Frank Garrick, an auto mechanic, who says that Thompson and he went through a marriage ceremony fourteen years ago.

Suspicion was directed towards Thompson when the police were told of his remarks indicating extreme interest in the matter. When arrested in the raid Thompson was dressed in a stylish black beaded dress, black silk hose and black shiny pumps, and a white hat with feathers. Five wigs and other feminine accessories were found in a bedroom together with the clothes that Thompson wore as a man.

Garrick and another man who were unidentified and a woman drug addict were also arrested. Although Garrick admitted that he had not worked for months, he and his "wife" possessed an auto. Mrs. Tesmer, when she viewed Thompson in his finery, said she was almost positive he was the slayer of her husband. Previously she had refused to identify any women suspects brought before her.

VOLCANO MAKES 50,000 HOMELESS

MT. ETNA SPITS FORTH MOULTEN LAVA

VESUVIUS IS RUMBLING

Action Expected From Ancient Crater—One Town Destroyed—Others In Danger

Rome, June 19.—With 50,000 persons homeless from the violent eruption of Mt. Etna, and a flow of molten lava continuing, the ancient volcano, Mt. Vesuvius, which destroyed Pompeii, began showing increased activity today.

The town of Guarrie at the base of Mt. Etna with a population of 17,000 now appears doomed unless saved by a miracle.

Deep trenches have been dug around Linguaglossa to divert the river of flowing lava. This town was reported destroyed last night, but it was found the report was untrue.

The outpouring lava from the flaming throat of Mt. Etna advances at a rate of twenty-five yeards an hour, inundating vineyards and hamlets in its path. The damage will run into the millions of dollars.

The eruption began at an early hour yesterday with a terrific explosion as though the end of the world had come. The whole top of Etna appeared to have blown off.

Then followed a rain of lava and ashes, which fell steadily for many minutes after the blast.

The people of villages at the foot of Mt. Etna rushed from their home and gathered in the streets. Women with babies clasped to their breasts rushed about hysterically. They sought aid in the churches; many fell on their knees and prayed. A thick pall of impenetrable smoke hung over their heads, so that they could not see what threatened.

A Terrifying Sight.

When the winds blew from the mountain's face the great black cloud, there was Etna, belching red hot lava, but with an aspect far more terrifying than ever before for five new flaming mouths had opened in her sides.

From these apertures, the streaming, flaming lava seeped swiftly toward the doomed villages. A flight of terror began.

Castiglione and Linguaglossa lay in the path of the destructive masses. These towns quickly were emptied. Great clouds of smoke, seen by the fleeing people who glanced over their shoulders, told first of the destruction of the pine forests of Linguaglossa, then the town itself. Then the lava reached the railroad and the station was burned.

Darkness came on, but there was no cessation of the lava's advance. By this time, people from all the surrounding country were in flight.

Earth Shocks Adds Terror.

Just before midnight a strong earth shock was felt, adding to its terrors to those of eruption.

Houses trembled on their foundations and the roads along which the inhabitants of the destroyed villages were escaping rose and shook beneath the despairing cavaleades.

A new mouth was seen to have opened in the volcano's side. It was near a spot named Mount Nero, after the dread emperor of ancient days, and from this new hole the most terrifying flow of lava came, racing ahead of the other streams.

Stream Splits into Branches.

Advancing relentlessly at a speed of about 250 years an hour, the molten stream split into branches, which poured down convenient slopes, sparing property on high ground. A second lava stream came pouring in on the fiery eddies of the first and the whole district was reported to be in the greatest peril.

General Battaglia commandeered all available autos in this part of the island and sent them toward Linguaglossa to relieve the stragglers.

Capania, June 19—Mud and Lava today destroyed the village of Cazanca, near the foot of Mount Etna.

THE WEATHER

Generally fair tonight and Wednesday, except probably local thunderstorms in the north portion; continued warm.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NODAWAY COUNTY

A STUDENT AT 57

It was an interesting incident at the graduation of Pennsylvania state college a few days ago, when a lady 57 years of age, Mrs. S. S. Farley, was given a degree in the botany course after 3½ years of study. She is the oldest person ever graduated from that institution.

If more people at that age were willing to take up new things and prepare themselves for the situation in life that they have to meet, much would be added to the happiness and the achievement of the world. Too many people at that age feel it too late for them to begin new undertakings, and they drift into a period of elderly life where they accomplish but little, and sometimes suffer privations.

The people who at that age prepare for future usefulness usually live longer and more successfully as the result of keeping up with modern life.

"CLEAN UP AS YOU GO"

President Harding has given his approval to a nation wide movement now being organized to induce motorists to avoid defacing the road sides and country scenes by leaving refuse around the places where they camp or eat lunches.

For a long time picnic parties have injured many pretty rural surroundings by this habit of leaving lunch boxes, waste paper and containers around the places where they squatted. As such parties have a liking for pretty country scenes, it has often happened that the most beautiful spots have been defaced by this remnant of litter.

The great number of motorists who are roaming about the country camping out in their own tents at any convenient spot where nightfall overtakes them, add to the number of people who may disfigure the countryside. If all these folks are to be careless about the way they handle their waste stuff, a great many of the choicest beauty spots of Missouri will be marred. Fortunately the big majority of these people are nature lovers who feel under obligation when they resort to a beautiful location, to leave it in as good condition as they find it, so that others can enjoy its beauty.

Unfortunately a lot of other folks are thoughtless about such matters, and never seem to realize any obligation of neatness. There should be a camapign of education to induce motoring and picnic parties to cherish wild nature as they find it, and keep it free from the human taint created by disorder.

People who eat their lunches or stay over night along the roadsides and in secluded nooks should pick up every pieces of waste paper, every egg shell, and any form of litter that suggests human occupancy, so that the spot will have the some charm it had when they entered it.

Chick Evans Tells when Golf Was First Played

First Discovered Date Was 1794—Don't Know Where It Came From.

The first discovered date was 1794, and the honor of being the first place where golf was played on the American continent belongs to the city of Charleston, South Carolina. These advertisements conclusively prove that the game was regularly organized at that early date, with the necessary officers, club house, and greens, and that the organization was continued annually for at least six years thereafter, and probably much longer.

The first advertisement follows, and I think will be read with interest—the word "Anniversary" indicating that the club had been in existence for a year:

NOTICE.

The Anniversary of the GOLF CLUB will be held on Saturday next, at the Club House on Harleston's Green where the members are requested to attend at one o'clock.

William Milligan, Secretary.

—Charleston City Gazette, October 13, 1795.

But the origin of golf seem wrapped in mystery, the honor apparently lying between Scotland and the Netherlands, and most of us arbitrarily awarding it to the land of our own descent. Of course the game largely as we know it came to us from Scotland, and as early as 1457 it had become so popular there that the Scottish Parliament of that year found it necessary to pass a law against it. The people were giving so much time to the game that they were neglecting the practice of archery, upon which the safety of the country depended. This law not proving as efficacious as desired, another act was passed fourteen years later. The country seemed wedded to golf; and we must, at least, arrive at the conclusion that if Scotland did not originate the game, she knew a good thing when she saw it, and at an early date assimilated it more completely than any other country of which we have record.—From "Eighteen Century Golf in America," by Charles (Chick) Evans, Jr., in the July Scribner's.

A Picture of Egypt from a Luxor Balcony

I write from Luxor, the site of ancient Thebes. From our high balcony the yellow cliffs across the Nile, pierced with the doorways of rifled tombs, stand as an imposing background to the line of mortuary temples erected along their eastern base. Medinet Habu, the Ramesseum, and the terraced temple of Queen Hatsheput, the last magnificently set in a great bay of the highest palisades, with the two Colossi guarding on the plain the buried fragments of the greatest temple of them all, testify to the opulence and endurance of the dominant city of antiquity. Behind these cliffs, which form the eastern boundary of the Valley of the Kings, lies the newly discovered tomb of Tutankhamen, tunnelled in the base of the similar cliffs that enclose the valley on the west.

With the temple of Luxor only a hundred yards from our window, and the colossal Karnak temple less than two miles to the north, the scene is inspiring enough to-day. But what must it have been when Homer, in the ninth book of the Iliad, wrote thus of the riches of Thebes:

"All the gold
Sent to Orchomenos or royal Thebes,
Egyptian treasure-house of countless wealth,
Who boasts her hundred gates, through each of which
With horse and car two hundred warriors march."

An Autoists Diary—No. 1

TUESDAY

The car slipped off the old auto jack on the Lee Hill the other evening, and I had a hard time stopping it. This will not happen again, for I am going to get a new type of auto jack at THE FARMERS AUTO SUPPLY CO. I've seen it: it's the real thing.

New Service Fitted to New Possibilities

WE move swiftly in America — change is the order of the day — industrial economics are changing—labor relationships are changing. The size of the oil business is changing and the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) keeping step with progress, is changing its methods of doing business, to meet the new conditions as they arise.

We invent, and improve, and learn, and go ahead.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) developed the Burton Process to increase the recovery of gasoline to meet the demand caused by the increasing number of automotive machines. It improved merchandising methods until its distribution and marketing systems are the standard of efficiency for the industry.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) developed new methods of handling its business. Many of these are applied to administration inside the organization, — as for instance, the Industrial Relations Plan, the Annuity Plan, and the Stock Purchasing Plan, all of which have resulted in bringing the Company and its employes closer together.

Other methods have expanded the Company's activities in new directions, — as for instance, in the development of a chain of service stations located at convenient points throughout the ten Middle Western states where the motorist may secure his requirements of fuel and oil in such quantities as he may need.

This is but one of the many improvements which the Company has adopted to better the service which it is rendering the people of the Middle West.

All these methods tend to hold down prices. This is recognized in a recent article in Petroleum Age which says, "No other product or power of like value, obtained at such expense and under such hazardous conditions, is furnished the people at such reasonable prices at all points of the country, as oil and its products."

In the petsoleum industry the real problem of the hour is service. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is continually fitting new service to new possibilities and adapting its established service to meet new conditions. This policy makes for prosperous business, without which no nation can hope for general prosperity.

As the demand for petroleum products increases, it will be found that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has put itself, by progressive development of new possibilities, in a position to give a service commensurate with the increasing demand.

Salt-Spilling Superstition.

Ask ten people why they are horrified at the idea of spilling salt, and nine of them will admit that they think it is unlucky, but do not know the reason. It is the same with most of our superstitions, many of which are as old as the human race.

Salt is one of the necessaries of life, and to eat it in a man's house in the East is today a sign of friendship, as it was in the days of Abraham. If you refuse to eat his salt you offer him the deadliest insult, while the accidental spilling of it could easily be mistaken for a willful act, and might cost a clumsy man his life.

If, however, he picked up a pinch and threw it over his left shoulder he signified that the spilling had been unintentional.

Famous Writers Dull Companions.

Many of the most brilliant and witty authors have been known to be very dull and uninteresting when engaged in conversation with other persons.

Descartes, the famous mathematician and philosopher; La Fontaine, celebrated for his witty fables, and Buffon, the naturalist, were all singularly deficient in the power of conversation. Marmontel, the novelist, was so dull in society that a friend said to him after an interview, "I must go and read one of your tales in recompense to myself for the weariness of hearing you."

THE WORLD IN SPRINGTIME

Then Is When Angler Who Really Loves the Sport May Be Said to Have Come Into His Own.

It carries us into the most wild and beautiful scenery of Nature, amongst the mountain lakes, and the clear and lovely streams that gush from the higher ranges of elevated hills, or that make their way through the cavities of calcareous strata. How delightful in the early spring, after the dull and tedious time of winter, when the frosts disappear and the sunshine warms the earth and waters, to wander forth by some clear stream, to see the leaf bursting from the purple bud, to scent the odors of the bank perfumed by the violet, and enameled, as it were, with the primrose and the daisy; to wander upon the fresh turf below the shade of trees, whose bright blossoms are filled with the music of the bee; and on the surface of the waters to view the gaudy flies sparkling like animated gems in the sunbeams, whilst the bright and beautiful trout is watching them from below; to hear the twittering of the water birds, who, alarmed at your approach, rapidly hide themselves beneath the flowers and leaves of the water lily; and, as the season advances, to find all these objects changed for others of the same kind, but better and brighter, till the swallow and the trout contend, as it were, for the gaudy May fly, and till in pursuing your amusement in the calm and balmy evening you are serenaded by the songs of the cheerful thrush—performing the offices of paternal love, in thickets ornamented with the rose and woodbine.—From "Days of Fly Fishing" (1828).

THE OCCULT

By JANE GORDON

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

LARRY lay back in his chair and smiled at his hostess. "Now," he said, "I am ready for the town gossip. What has happened of interest in our old circle since I was last in your midst?"

Constance Barry laughed. She was fond of this big cousin of hers. He had been her first confidant, at the important time of her engagement to Noble Barry, who was now her husband.

"Well," she answered doubtfully, "if one could be sure what would most concern you—you used to like the Renolds girl, didn't you, Larry? She is married—"

"Alas!" sighed the cousin, mockingly. "Who," he asked irrelevantly, "is that young woman passing? Have not seen her before or I should remember. This charming young person appears to be quite sure of herself—who did you say she was, Connie?"

"You have not given me a chance to say," Constance replied. "The girl is Jackie Fleming. Jacqueline, the proper name bestowed by her parents; but masculine admirers affectionately call her Jack, or Jackie—as I see you will soon be doing."

The cousin raised questioning brows.

"Just a little flirt," he wanted to know, "or really worth meeting? I liked your Miss Jacqueline's eyes, Connie; sincere they appeared in their straightforward look."

"Most people do like Jackie's eyes," Constance answered dryly. "And they may be as sincere as your optimistic supposition. But at present she is the despair of the aunt who reared her since orphaned babyhood. Here was Jacqueline practically engaged to a reliable business man of her aunt's choice, when the foolish girl turns her flattering attention upon Teddy Barnes, lately from college."

Constance broke off abruptly; she was reading the morning's mail. "If this is not disappointing," she remarked. "Ramo cannot come to entertain at our party and he was to have been the great attraction. We are giving a garden party here and everyone is raving about the marvelous occult power of this new entertainer so we wrote to engage him. This fete was largely in the interest of charity. Ramo," added Constance enthusiastically, "has the most charming personality. He suggests that we find a local substitute who, dressed in imitation of his Oriental fashion, might tell fortunes to fill in the lapse."

Larry bowed. "Your humble servant," he agreed solemnly. Constance stared, then her eyes twinkled.

"Larry!" she cried, "if you only would. You can take parts so beautifully; and you are as charming, too, as you desire."

The tentlike shrine was at the shadowy end of the lawn. Speculatively the dark eyes of the seer regarded his latest seeker after hidden knowledge. During the past week or two he had come to know this perverse young creature pretty well. In fact, the tormenting thought of her caused him many troubled hours. Was it true, as Constance said, that Jacqueline, the adorable, loved that handsome Barnes youth? Was it equally true that she was undecided in her choice between him and the established business man who sought her hand? He, Ramo—Larry, must find out. So, gravely, he bent over the girl's palm. The pungent incense which came from the bronze bowl at his side was a perfume he was always to remember.

"I see," his voice droned, "a fair-haired youth whom you love—perhaps. I see here, also, an older man—who may love you. You hesitate which to choose. But I, Ramo, tell you to think long and be not hasty in your decision. Love must be proven, and to marry for riches is folly; false love is sorrow, and riches fade away."

The small hand trembled in his clasp. Jacqueline's eyes searched the brown-stained face bent low, beneath the dangling beads of the enveloping headdress. Fitfully the weird green light cast its shadow; the tent seemed an eerie place, and the home of Constance, hostess of the occasion, remotely far away.

"I am sorry," the girl said, "that love must be long proven. I believe in a quick, sure love. And a golden-haired lad has no love of mine; rather is he a good understanding friend whom I accept, at his own suggestion, to hold off, as we may, the pressing attention of that older man of riches, whose wish you read in my palm. With a determined relative like my aunt, one must sometimes use harmless deception. So, oh, Ramo of fame, for once your reading wisdom fails!"

Beneath the turban of Ramo, Larry's eyes flamed. "Jackie," he cried, "if then you believe in a quick, sure love, such was my love for you from the moment I first saw you. If I might only hope to make you care—enough to be my wife, Jackie! For this," he hurriedly explained, "is Larry, and not the true Ramo at all." The girl laughed softly.

"As if I had not known all the time," she said. "I am better at reading eyes and even a changed voice than you at palms, Mr. Larry."

When Constance came into the tent she drew back with a surprised cry—upon the seer's breast reclined the head of a fair subject.

"Oh, go away, Connie," remarked Jackie the invincible—"Ramo is telling my future."

CENTRAL PARK

This is an inn where any one
May take a lodging in the sun.
This is an inn whose fare is free,
Whose door swings wide to you and me.
Here rich and poor are both elate
To find the earth so intimate,
To find the green earth's self again
So close to paven haunts of men.

A high blue roof, and music made
By children's voices unafraid,
A bench whereon to dream, and smile
With memories for a little while,
A place to keep your tryst with spring
When bud and branch come blossoming—
Here may you rest, and touch the sod,
Remembering hope, and joy and God.

Oh, there are many inns in town
With rows of windows looking down,
Yet none is fair as this, and none
But this is open to the sun.
And only here shall spring spread wide
Her loveliness on every side,
Blessing the eyes of those who mark
Beauty within the city park.

—Hilda Morris, in the New York Sun.

DENY CLIMATE IS CHANGING

Experts of the United States Department of Agriculture Combat Rather Widespread Idea.

The fact that the past two years have been unusually mild in most parts of the United States has led to considerable discussion as to whether this portion of the earth is undergoing a general change of climate. The weather bureau, United States Department of Agriculture, says, however, that records can be furnished which disprove this idea. Periods have occurred in the past and will occur again, when for a few years, the weather has seemed or will seem to be noticeably warmer or colder than the average.

While there are well-recognized alternations in climatic conditions, as of wet and dry, hot and cold, etc., little is known with regard to definite laws of sequence of weather conditions over extended periods of years. Within ordinary historic times there is practically no evidence that there has been a definite and progressive change in the climate in one direction or the other, but rather that the same sort of alternations are now succeeding each other indefinitely, as in earlier historic times. It is also believed that the amount of change, if any, is too small and the extent of territory involved too indefinite to be of economic interest. Until definite knowledge is available concerning the law of sequence of weather conditions, and possible periodic cycles affecting the weather are quantitatively established, scientific long range forecasting is impracticable.

UNABLE TO INTERPRET DISK

Scientists Admit They Merely Make Guesses at Meaning of Characters on Ancient Tablet.

Ever since 1908, when the Phaestos disk was found on the site of the palace of Phaestos in southern Crete, it has puzzled archeologists. It looks much like a phonograph record. It is from three-fifths to four-fifths of an inch thick and is six inches in diameter. It is made of fine clay and is supposed to have been shaped during the Middle Minoan period, or approximately 1600 B. C.

The disk is stamped with 45 pictographs arranged in spiral form to be read, apparently, from the outer edge to the center. Four-fifths of the characters are entirely new. One that is exceptionally puzzling—the plumed head of a warrior—appears not less than 19 times.

At one time archeologists hoped that the characters on the disk would prove to be elementary forms of the Phoenician alphabet. Then the thought of an alphabet was discarded and students sought to interpret the characters by regarding them as notes of music.

Ocean Reclaims Island?

Easter island, in the Pacific ocean, 2,300 miles off the coast of Chile, has disappeared, according to the captain of a French merchant ship. Although persistent rumors are rife in Hawaii that the island sunk during the Chilean earthquake a few months ago, no confirmation has been received. The French captain, seeking to verify his position, tried to sight Easter island, but declares he found nothing but water where the island should have been.

Americans Eat Less of Wheat and Bread

Conference to Remedy Conditions in Wheat Industry Open at Washington Today.

Washington, June 19. — Americans eat less bread and wheat per capita than any other nation in the world. Therefore most of the farmers west of the Mississippi are broke and are losing $3 to $6 per acre because of the low prices.

To discuss this condition and to try to remedy it, five hundred representatives of two hundred organizations of the allied wheat industries of the nation is meeting this afternoon upon a call from Gov. J. A. O. Preuss of Minnesota.

A permanent wheat council, government controlled and limiting production and a campaign to increase consumption, are some of the relief measures to be discussed.

Sidney Anderson, member of Congress from Minnesota was elected permanent chairman and G. H. Bohler of Lynchburg, of the Farmers Union, was named permanent secretary.

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, discussed "The Public and the Agricultural Problem," and urged a national wheat council.

WHAT THE WORLD IS DOING

AS SEEN BY POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE

X-Raying Heart Action of School Children

Impressed by the fact that 50 to 70 per cent of school children are to some extent physically defective—a portion having curvature of the spine or other less obvious deformities, while fully two per cent suffer from diseases of the heart—physicians of Minneapolis have introduced a new system of physical examination. Chief among the new devices for this purpose is an X-ray camera for taking pictures of a child's heart while he is engaged in pedaling a stationary bicycle.

By means of a metal framework the body of the child is made to support the picture-taking apparatus, so arranged that the box containing the X-ray tube hangs on his back, whereas the film holder is suspended in front of the heart region. The child is then directed to "ride" the bicycle as fast and hard as he can, and the picture of the heart is taken while he is in action. Changes in size and shape, which help to tell the story of health or disease, are thus easily recorded. The bicycle is also used to measure the child's capacity for physical work, and to determine the effect of exercise on pulse rate and blood pressure.

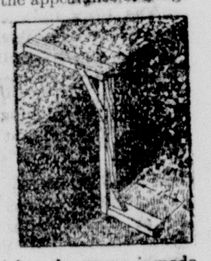
Monster Locomotive Pivots on Front Truck

"Double headers," "helpers" and "pushers"—the first named of which, in a railroader's language, means two locomotives at the front end of a train, and the last two designating the locomotives coupled on the rear end, to move trains up steep grades—probably will become only memories, if monster locomotives like the one illustrated are to be generally used.

When this big Mallet-type locomotive takes a curve in the track, it cannot make the turn as its smaller brothers do, as it is 108 feet long—one of the largest ever built. Its boilers swing on pivots independently of the wheels. It has 12 driving wheels, weighs 850,000 pounds—425 tons—and carries 12,000 gallons of water and 4,000 gallons of oil. Its use has largely been confined to freight hauling on a western road, and it easily handles a hundred cars through the Rocky Mountains.

A Gauge for Clipping Hedges

A little time spent in making the hedge-clipping gauge shown in the drawing will go far to improve the appearance of hedge fences by making it possible to clip the hedge uniformly.



The perpendicular member of the gauge is made from a piece of 2 by 4-in. material, but the horizontal parts may be of lighter stuff, the dimensions to which such a gauge is made depending upon individual requirements. In use, the trimming is begun at one end of the hedge, the gauge being held in an upright position by standing upon the bottom member. Clip as much of the hedge as projects above the top of the gauge, moving it along as the work proceeds.

Keeping Out the Rain

The drawing shows a good method of keeping rain out of the open window of a sleeping room, where it is essential to have fresh air at all times, even during rainy weather. A wooden box is made to fit between the window jambs and rest on the sill. It is held in place by means of thumbscrews on the sides, and also by the weight of the window on top. The opening is made on the under side of the box, so that rain cannot enter.

Gentlemen:

To any that are interested in a Durant car, will say I purchased a Durant Four the past summer and to date the cost has only been for gas and oil and she runs like a humming bird flies.

Last Monday took a trip from Kansas City to Higginsville, Missouri, 59 miles one way and made the round trip on 6 gallons of gas.

You will find it a very easy car to operate, fine on a short turn, easy to brake and clutch which makes it exceptionally convenient for a lady to handle and operate.

Excellent hill car.

KANSAS CITY MARKETS

(By Charles M. Pipkin.)

Kansas City Stock Yards, June 18.—After showing a rather slow advance last week, the hog market today developed more energy and prices rose 10 to 20 cents under all active trade. Cattle receipts were moderate and with demand broad, trade was active at steady to 15 cents higher prices. There was a decided drop in receipts of South Texas grass fat cattle, and that movement is about over. Lambs were about steady, with a fairly good tone in the trade.

Today's Receipts.

Receipts today were 10,000 cattle, 14,000 hogs and 9,000 sheep, compared with 12,000 cattle, 15,000 hogs and 7,000 sheep a week ago, and 15,950 cattle, 20,700 hogs and 5,750 sheep a year ago.

Beef Cattle.

A good demand was evident in the cattle market, and practically all killing grades moved freely at steady to 15 cents higher prices. Good to choice steers sold at $9.75 to $11.00 and there was nothing with outstanding finish to create a new top for the year. Short fed and warmed up steers, some of them sappy from grass, brought $8.75 to $9.65. A few south Texas grass fat steers sold at $5.50 to $7.50. Mixed yearlings, cows and heifers and calves were in active demand though not quotably higher. There is better demand for common cows than last week.

Stockers and Feeders.

Stockers and feeders moved readily at fully steady prices. The supply was not as large as on preceding Mondays, but quality showed a better average.

Hogs.

After an absence of more than two weeks, the 7 cent price appeared in the hog market today, when there was an advance of 15 to 20 cents. Monday of last week was the low day, and each day since then there has been a steady improvement. Today's prices were 45 to 55 cents higher than a week ago. The top was $7.00, and the bulk of sales $6.75 to $6.95. Packing sows sold at $5.80 and $5.85, and pigs $5.75 to $6.35. Receipts are falling short of a year ago, for the first time this year.

Sheep and Lambs.

Prices for sheep and lambs were unchanged from last week's close. Native lambs at $14.00 to $16.00 and slipped Texas wethers at $7.25 to $7.75 made up the total receipts. Native lambs are showing the usual seasonable difference in quality.

Horses and Mules.

Receipts for horses and mules continue small, and demand has little chance to develop full proportions. Best inquiry is for all purpose workers.

The County Agent's Column

October 15, 16, 17 Set for Annual Event At St. Joseph

The fourth annual Northwest Missouri Baby Beef Show is officially announced for October 15, 16 and 17 at the stockyards in South St. Joseph.

J. O. Barclay, president of the Stock yards Company, and E. M. Carroll, traffic manager, announced cash prizes exceeding $500 in addition to five free trips for the winning club members in each of the seventeen counties having entries in this contest.

The first day of the show will be devoted to a judging contest for club members. Handsome medals for this contest have been provided by the County agents of Northwest Missouri. These will be awarded to individuals and team members.

On the second day the official judging of the club calves will take place; and on the third day the auction sale.

Exactly 430 calves are now being fed for this show by boys and girls in clubs organized by the Missouri Agricultural Extension Service. Of this total, according to H. M. Garlock, animal husbandry specialist, in charge of this work, 144 are Herefords, 187 are Shorthorns, 87 are Angus and 12 are of breeds not specified.

The local county show will probably be held in Maryville, October 12 or 13 so that the calves can be shipped to the district show immediately after the county show.

The Hessian Fly Bugbear.

Not long ago I was having a friendly chat with a farmer when the conversation turned to the prospect of the wheat crop. In his usual joking sort of way he said, "Say! I wish you fellows would quit talking about the Hessian flies every fall. Last fall the men around here who sowed their wheat early got lots of fall pasture on it; but I waited until October, like you said to do, and mine never got up so I could pasture it at all."

"Well of course," I admitted, "if you want wheat for pasture, you will have to sow it early; but the recommendation that goes out every fall to delay sowing until the fly-free date in order to avoid Hessian flies in the wheat is made for the men who want to harvest and thresh the crop for grain. You can get by with early sowing lots of times and your wheat might not be damaged by the flies, but it is almost certain that you will get caught sometime; and a little fall pasture is all you get out of your wheat crop. That happens almost every year to somebody in this county. They do not see any signs of Hessian flies at harvest time, or are just too busy to look. Then along in September the wheat is ready, they forget the Hessian flies and the wheat is put in. I know at least one field of wheat this year that was plowed up and put in corn. It was on good land, but the wheat was sowed last September. Nothing wrong was noticed until the wheat was nearly ready to head out this spring. Then the owner of the field found that only about ten per cent of the stalks had strength enough to grow up and head out. The rest of it was short and yellow. Hessian flies were there by the millions.

A case like this here and there reminds us that eternal vigilence is the price of success. A lot of men have found out that the chances of losing out on a good crop of wheat on account of waiting until October before sowing are not nearly so great as the likelihood of suffering serious damage from Hessian flies by sowing early. They make a special effort to plow early and disc the seed bed repeatedly; then the seed bed is in ideal condition and the wheat grows off quickly; so that waiting a week or two to sow the wheat does not make any difference with the growth nor reduce the yield, but it does get away from the flies.

Interesting Featuers for Dunning Recital

Several interesting features are included on the program of the recital tonight of the pupils of Miss Geneva Wilfley of the Conservatory of Music who will give a demonstration of the Dunning System. In the ensemble numbers there will be four and six children using two pianos. One girl, who has had only one term of the Dunning system will transpose the music in either the major or minor key, as is requested by the audience. Another small girl will take down on a blackboard a melody as it is played on the piano by Miss Wilfley. Another interesting feature will be the making of rhythm pictures the closing one to be a picture of the flag.

The recital will begin at 7:45 o'clock and will be held at the First Christian Church. The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

MRS. G. W. HALL SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lima, Ohio.—"Indeed, your medicine is all you say it is! I had very severe troubles such as women often have, and could do no heavy work. I was sick for several years, and from reading your ads. I finally decided to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now doing my own washing, which I haven't done for several years, and can walk long distances without those dragging pains and weak feelings. The Vegetable Compound is fine, and I never forget to say a good word for it to other women when they say they need something."—Mrs. G. W. HALL, 539 Hazel Avenue, Lima, Ohio.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Hall's experience is but one of many.

granting of the injunction therein prayed will serve the ends of justice, it is therefore ordered that the defendants George L. Wilfley, Samuel G. Gillam, John D. Richey and Burt M. Rowley be and they each and all hereby are restrained and enjoined from counting any trick, fancy or unusually good shots in the golf course to be played between the plaintiffs and defendants on the course of the Maryville Country Club on June 18, 1923; and that said defendants be and they hereby are further enjoined and restrained from turning in individual scores lower than 70 each.

JOHN M. DAWSON,
Judge.

Bankers Protest

The Bankers claim that the Lawyers resorted to unfair tactics (in which they are so proficient), in that an effort to cause mental worry with the result of "blowing up" the Bankers, they went to the Honorable John M. Dawson, Judge of the Circuit Court (who, by the way is a member of their profession), and obtained an Order of Court of such mysterious verbage and so threatening and restrictive as to carry with it the very utmost mental disturbance. Such order was served upon the Bankers by policeman England in full uniform accompanied by Chas. McCaffrey, ex-prosecuting attorney, soon after the game began, and when it was apparent that the Bankers clearly out-classed the Lawyers as golfers, and would have greatly humiliated the Lawyers by the results of the game had they been left undisturbed. This order charged the Bankers with being prepared to make trick plays and all that sort of thing. It is generally conceded that Gillam, one of the Bankers, did pull off a trick play at the third tee by driving from the third tee to the third green with a "putter," but Gillam claims, and it seems to be a fact, that this play was made before the Court's Order was served upon him.

Poor Judgment In Challenge

The Bankers say that the Lawyers exhibited their usual mental stupidity in challenging the Bankers, because it is a well known fact that a good golfer must be possessed of superior mind and mathematical ability and the Lawyers should have known that in this respect they were no match for the Bankers. However, they showed a degree of mental ability above the usual average of lawyers in trying to offset this mental and mathematical advantage of the Bankers by running in as one of their players "Rip" Deatherage, who, while an attorney, is associated with and entirely surrounded by Bankers, and has, of course, naturally acquired some of the mental and mathematical proficiency of the Bankers. The result of this coup upon the part of the Lawyers enabled the Lawyers in the foursome in which Deatherage played to bring in a score of 4 up on their opponents, but of course, such exclusive Lawyers as George Pat Wright and Bob Ellison, who played against Burt Rowley and Gillam had no chance to turn in a favorable score and the result was that Rowley and Gillam turned in a score of 5 up on their opponents so that the Bankers won the tournament by 1 up.

Lawyers Humiliated

The Bankers feel that they now have the Lawyers in a very humiliating position that in keeping with the Lawyers' agreement to keep the Bankers out of jail they will be compelled to go into court, for the Bankers deny all of the allegations of the petition and the court, being composed of one of their members and under the same obligation to protect the Bankers, will be compelled to find for the Bankers directly opposite to his original finding. In other words, the Lawyers are going to have to "eat crow."

The Lawyers Speak.

The Lawyers say that since the game they have learned the Bankers, are charging the issuance of the injunction and the service thereof while the playing was in progress were unfair. The Lawyers deny that the injunction was served on the Bankers for the purpose of disconcerting them in their playing and say legal process was resorted to simply as a matter of self-protection. If the Bankers were perturbed by the service of the injunction, it was simply because they were thwarted in their schemes and felt helpless when forced to play the game fairly, but to all appearances they were not in the least flustered when the papers were delivered them by the officers, and acted as cooly as if they were used to being arrested every day.

Two Parts to Golf

In reply to the rumor that the injunction was obtained to discount the Bankers superior mathematical ability, the Lawyers admit the injunction was aimed at that very thing, among others. There are two parts to a golf game; one is the playing and the other is in keeping the score. In the keeping of the score this vaunted mathematical ability of the Bankers comes in especially handy. It was probably due to the superior ability of the Bankers in "figuring" and to the fact that the Bankers charged the Lawyers interest on their score that the game resulted in a victory of one stroke for the Bankers.

About the Agreements.

The Lawyers state they will have no difficulty in living up to their agreement with the Bankers to keep the latter out of jail, notwithstanding the pending injunction suit. The agreement between the Bankers and Lawyers only required the latter to keep the Bankers from being incarcerated and did not bind them to protect the Bankers from fines and penalties. It is probable that when the matter comes up before the court the lawyers will compromise by asking that the court require the playing of another game to settle the questions in dispute at which the score will be kept on an adding machine or by some mechanical and disinterested method.

Late Telegraph News

Koshkonong, Mo., June 19—Once a prominent and prosperous Minneapolis coal dealer, John H. Swanson now lives the life of a "hermit of the hills" ten miles north of here. Swanson, a bachelor, is contented to live the life of a recluse in his dingy little hut.

His home consists of one room, eight feet square, the logs of which stand on end and flare outward at the top. The roof of the little hut is made of cowhide and canvass with a piece of taupaulin stretched over a frame work, hitched so it will drain all rainwater.

Just a few steps from his humble home is his stable where his horses are housed. The team is used in hauling to town railroad ties which he makes on his land.

Swanson took up this life when he met with great financial reverses during a business depression in Minneapolis in 1893. He has about 80 acres of Florida fruit land in addition to his 80-acre tract near here.

St. Louis, Mo., June 19—After you go through the first 20 years of married life, it isn't so bad. These are the worst, according to divorce records in the country outside of this city.

One hundred and two divorces were granted in Clayton county from Jan. 1 to June 1 this year. Three per cent were granted to couples who had lived together for 20 years or more, eight per cent in first year of marriage, four per cent in the second and third years, 40 per cent between the fourth and sixth years, thirty per cent between the sixth and tenth years, and fifteen per cent between the tenth and twentieth years.

Topeka, Kan., June 19—Where the fields are dry enough for the binders to operate, wheat cutting is beginning in Southern Kansas counties, according to reports received here. J. C. Mohler, secretary of the state board of agriculture said his reports from the southern counties were that the wheat was ripe and ready for cutting, but that most of the fields were too wet for the binders.

Kansas City, Mo., June 19—President Harding will be greeted by the American flag from the time of his arrival Friday morning until he departs Friday night. Flags will decorate the Union Station, the route of the parade, Convention Hall, and every business house in the downtown district. Twenty thousand flags will be distributed for the occasion. Of this number ten thousand will be given to school children along the route of the parade and an additional ten thousand will be given to the audience in convention hall. Those who receive the flags at the hall will be asked to waive them when the band plays at the entrance of the presidential party.

On rough or weedy greens, is it advisable to use a club other than a putter?

By all means use a club other than a putter when a green is rough or weedy. When the distance is less than eight feet to the cup I would recommend an iron putter with a bit of a loft on the blade. If the distance is more than eight feet, use a mashie iron or jigger. Either of these clubs will give the ball a pitch and help it to run truer to the hole because of the slight loft given at the start of its travel.
